With Advertising Platforms and Media Technologies in a State of Constant Flux, Unanticipated Intellectual Property Issues Can Arise at Any Moment

Learn to Make the Right Decisions and Protect Your Brand

As companies increasingly focus on the use of cutting-edge advertising strategies to reach consumers, a new minefield of intellectual property risks has arisen, presenting complex and changing issues that are hard to anticipate and very difficult for counsel to control. Many of the latest trends in marketing involve multi-pronged campaigns that combine traditional media with the use of new platforms, incorporating multiple web domain names, interactive social networking pages and mobile text messaging promotions. With technology changing on an almost daily basis, in-house counsel are faced with tremendous challenges when trying to understand what constitutes protected IP and how to guide their companies through this period of explosive innovation. Often the answers are far from clear when trying to apply earlier legal precedents to emergent advertising practices, or determining your rights when seeking to repurpose content for use in different media. And with litigation a constant and costly concern, it is vital to be able to identify, and nip in the bud, any activities that could open the door to claims that your company has infringed on a protected trademark, copyright or patent, or violated someone's rights of publicity.

American Conference Institute's Advanced IP Forum for Advertising Counsel is a unique new program that has been tailored to provide expert, detailed knowledge that you can apply directly to your review of your company's marketing practices. Our faculty of experienced counsel for major brand and media companies will go well beyond identifying trends as they provide you with strategies and practical tips for avoiding the new intellectual property pitfalls that can lead to weakening of your brand and/or exposure to litigation.

With important assets at stake in an increasingly connected world advertising arena, the ante has been upped for brand counsel. Attendees at ACI's Advanced IP Forum for Advertising Counsel will learn how intellectual property laws are being applied by the courts to the technologically-driven advertising landscape, and how the level of IP protection varies overseas. Practical takeaways will include advice on what to look out for when monitoring the conduct of competitors and best practices for weighing when, and how to respond to infringing use of your company's valuable intellectual property.

Add value to your attendance by taking advantage of our two interactive workshops. Workshop A, Best Practices for Protection of IP Rights when Employing Social Media will provide hands-on guidance that all attorneys practicing in this area need in order to help their companies develop proper social media safeguards and avoid IP-related liabilities. Workshop B, Strategies for Resolving Conflicts and Litigation Avoidance in a Virtual Age will guide you to be able respond effectively to critical scrutiny of your company's use of IP in evolving marketing practices, and provide strategies for rapidly terminating conduct by others that may infringe upon your own brand's rights.

Register now to ensure your place at this timely and unique event! Call 1-888-224-2480, fax your registration form to 1-877-927-1563, or register online at www.americanconference.com/advertisingIP.

WHO YOU WILL MEET:

- » In-house counsel for any company involved in advertising or marketing its products or services
- » Marketing & advertising directors
- » Brand managers
- » Attorneys who specialize in the following practice areas:
 - Advertising
 - Marketing
 - Promotions
 - Entertainment/media
 - Consumer protection
 - E-commerce/internet
 - Trademarks and copyright
 - Privacy
 - IP
 - Licensing

A company’s ability to effectively communicate with customers in a global marketplace is critical in today’s increasingly connected world. Yet as marketers are reaching broader global audiences and looking for opportunities to interact with consumers both in the U.S. and abroad, it is critical to be aware that IP protection laws are different in every country. This session provides a unique opportunity to gain valuable insight about how you can protect your brand and its intellectual property assets. Experts on the global IP environment will share practical guidance on how to:

- Understand what foreign laws may serve to help competitors to weaken your brand
- Handle domain name and trademark conflicts on the world stage
- Comprehend how registrations are treated under the Madrid Agreement

- Perform international trademark prosecutions
- Insure your IP strategies are in sync with local laws
- Avoid pitfalls relating to keyword advertising and other search engine tactics that might be prohibited in some areas
- Develop practical strategies for tracking the relevant developments in multiple legal systems
- Implement strategies that reconcile the conflicting legal standards
- Evaluate and contrast potential methods for IP enforcement in major markets including China, the EU and Canada

In today's competitive marketplace, intellectual property rights may be your client's most valuable assets. Protecting these assets, as well as defending against infringement allegations made by others, is critical to a company's success and may necessitate being ready to litigate a dispute. In this session, seasoned IP litigators will share unique inside insights for advertising and media counsel on:

- What “triggers” they are seeing for IP litigation in the context of advertising
- What to do first when you receive a cease and desist letter
- When to file a declaratory judgment action, to try to establish that no likelihood of confusion exists from your activities
- Responding to a request from another company for a license fee
- Assessing the predictability of successful outcomes in IP litigation
- Comparing potential costs for litigating different types of disputes

POST-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS » FRIDAY APRIL 29, 2011

Workshop A » 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

(Registration and Continental Breakfast begin at 8:15 a.m.)

Best Practices for Protection of IP Rights when Employing Social Media

Steve Caldwell
Senior Counsel--Legal/IP
The Procter & Gamble Company (Cincinnati, OH)

Asim Khan
Counsel – Sales, Marketing, and Media Law
Samsung Electronics (Ridgefield Park, NJ)

Janet L. Cullum

With social media now an essential tool for interacting with consumers, attorneys need a solid understanding of how intellectual property rights come into play when using these still-developing platforms. Sites such as Facebook, Twitter, and YouTube each present unique legal challenges, and the underlying technologies and user interfaces can be confusing for counsel to fully comprehend. This interactive workshop will enable attendees to go back to their companies much better equipped to spot the IP “red flags” that can pose a danger to their brands in this exploding area. Points of discussion will include:

- Understanding social media technology and how different types of IP are utilized and intersect with content
- Ensuring that you do not cede too much control over your IP assets when working with networking sites
- Addressing potential IP concerns when negotiating social media partnerships and co-promotions
- Devising effective procedures for monitoring your social media exposure and discerning questionable statements or use of IP assets
- Uncovering the processes for removing offensive content from different sites and the different protocols for offensive material
- Analyzing potential liabilities when a consumer posts new or borrowed content online and developing a strategy for controlling these risks
- Balancing free speech with concerns over potential exposure to claims of defamation and libel
- Managing and protecting consumer data
- Ensuring that monetization strategies for use of site traffic information do not open the door to consumer litigation or raise privacy concerns
- Understanding the terms of service that Facebook, MySpace and other sites impose upon their users
- Knowing when you can share information with other advertisers

Workshop B » 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.

(Registration begins at 12:30 p.m.)

Strategies for Resolving Conflicts and Litigation Avoidance in a Virtual Age

Joshua Blank
Counsel
United Business Media (New York, NY)

Andrew Berger
Tannenbaum Helpert Syracuse & Hirschtritt LLP (New York, NY)

Hand in hand with the increased adoption by companies of developing technologies has been the arrival of a new battleground, with claims that particular marketing practices constitute an infringement of various IP rights. Counsel are thus increasingly being required to make, or respond to, such claims and it is critical to be prepared to respond swiftly and effectively to instances of misappropriation that can quickly have global implications. Our expert faculty will provide guidance on:

- Strengthening your position in potential litigation via the use of effective notices
- Shielding yourself from liability with tailored disclaimers
- Implementing advertising screening policies that reflect heightened concern for IP rights and analysis of relevant use restrictions and permissions
- Responding to misappropriation of your IP
 - determining whether to directly contact the infringer
 - drafting language for a cease and desist letter
 - compelling the infringer to remove content from their web site
 - making requests for damages
- Determining what to do when you receive a claim that you have inadvertently violated a patent or other IP right in developing your web sites
- Setting a settlement strategy after looking at precedent and weighing the strength of your position
- Ensuring that a potential settlement will be effective in light of the viral nature of the Internet
